

Draft — not yet reviewed by a lawyer. This describes accurately how the Zenoeats service works. It has not been checked for legal sufficiency or enforceability in any jurisdiction. See “Before this page goes live” at the foot.

Terms of Service

Last updated 21 September 2026

What Zenoeats is

Zenoeats is ordering software. Restaurants use it to publish a menu and take orders; you use it to place one. Zenoeats does not cook, sell or deliver food.

Your order is a contract between you and the restaurant. The restaurant sets its prices, decides what it sells, prepares the food, takes the payment on its own payment account and, where it offers delivery, makes the delivery. The restaurant is the merchant of record.

Ordering

- You can order with an account or as a guest. Either way you must give a name, a phone number, an email address and an address.
- The details you give must be your own and must be correct. A wrong phone number or address is the most common reason an order goes wrong, and it is not something the restaurant can fix for you.
- Prices shown include the taxes the restaurant is required to charge. The price is always calculated by the server when you order, so what you are charged is what the restaurant has actually set.
- An order is not accepted until the payment is confirmed. Until then nothing has been charged and nothing is being prepared.
- A restaurant may refuse or cancel an order — because it has run out of something, is closing, or cannot deliver to your address.

Paying

Payment is by card, through Stripe, on the restaurant's account. Card details are entered directly into Stripe and never reach Zenoeats.

Zenoeats may take a fee from the restaurant for each order. That fee is between Zenoeats and the restaurant and is not added to your bill.

Collecting and delivery

For a pickup order you will be given a code. Show it at the counter; it is what tells the restaurant the order is yours. Do not share it.

For a delivery, the restaurant delivers within the area it has set. Any time shown is an estimate and not a promise.

Refunds and cancellations

Once a restaurant has started preparing your food an order generally cannot be cancelled. Refunds are decided and issued by the restaurant. The full position is on the refunds and cancellations page.

Food, allergies and intolerances

Menu descriptions, ingredients and allergen information come from the restaurant. Zenoeats does not prepare the food, does not inspect kitchens and cannot verify what is in a dish.

If you have a food allergy or intolerance, contact the restaurant directly before ordering.

Food is prepared in kitchens that handle allergens, and cross-contact cannot be ruled out.

Your account

- Keep your sign-in details to yourself.
- Do not use the service to place false orders, to interfere with it, or to try to reach information that is not yours.
- An account may be suspended for any of the above. You can close your account at any time — see data deletion.

Availability

Zenoeats is provided as it is. It is not guaranteed to be uninterrupted or error-free, and it may be taken down for maintenance.

Where responsibility sits

Complaints about food — its quality, its safety, whether it matched the description, whether it arrived — are for the restaurant that sold it.

Zenoeats is responsible for the ordering software itself. Nothing in these terms removes any right you have that cannot be removed by agreement, including rights under consumer protection law.

Privacy

What is collected and who it is shared with is set out in the Privacy Policy.

Changes

These terms may change. The date at the top changes with them, and the version in force when you order is the one that applies to that order.

Privacy Policy Refunds & Cancellations Data Deletion Back to the menu

Before this page goes live, a lawyer needs to confirm: the legal entity name, trading address and governing law, none of which appear above; whether the limitation of liability and the allocation of responsibility between Zenoeats and the restaurant are enforceable where you operate, and that they match what the restaurant agreement says — the two documents must not contradict each other; the consumer cancellation rights that apply to prepared food in your jurisdiction, which may override the refunds page; what dispute resolution and jurisdiction clause you want; and whether allergen information must be presented in a specific statutory form rather than the warning above. Delete this paragraph and the banner at the top once that is done.